

I am writing in opposition to giving Low Power FM (LPFM) priority over current FM translator services. I listen to KLOVE on a local translator on 88.3 in Norfolk, Nebraska. While KLOVE is a national service, it greatly impacts our local community. KLOVE provides positive broadcasting that is family-friendly which is far different than our other local FM stations. Without KLOVE in our local market, me and my children would be forced to listen to stations that do not provide suitable entertainment for young, impressionable children. If any stations should be displaced, it should be those that consistently present inappropriate material riddled with sexual innuendo and vulgar language. KLOVE and other services like it that rely on the translator services are not these stations. I urge you to keep the translator services in place, with no priority given to the LPFM. KLOVE is clearly serving the public interest in my community and deserves the right to keep broadcasting. Thank you for your consideration.
